

Farming and Countryside Education

Ensuring that children and young people learn about food and farming in a sustainable countryside.

The Farming and Countryside Education charity would be pleased to work with NSSM and to include storytelling as part of farm visits. The FACE website (<http://www.face-online.org.uk>) has a wealth of information about how to get involved. There are resource sheets, information booklets and recipes too.

Regional organisers are situated across the country and the easiest way to find farms to visit is to look in the 'places to visit' section of the Countryside Classroom web site. The Countryside Classroom is a valuable resource with many inspiring projects for schools, youngsters and families on animal welfare, farming, countryside matters, the environment and much more.

(<http://www.countrysideclassroom.org.uk>)

Most of the working farms will host visits from organised school groups and the farm parks will also be on the list for families to visit.

It would be great if Book Groups and other interested parties could work with FACE for sharing stories for NSSM...do let us know if you get involved and send photos of your event to be celebrated on the NSSM page of the FCBG website.